

Question 1751) - A stranger is holding the wealth of an absent son. The stranger spent on the son's parents from that wealth. Is he liable to compensate that amount?

A: If spent with the court's permission then he is not liable. If he spent without permission then he is liable.

~ al-Quduri ~