

Question 1296) - What will the substitute be?

A: If he usurped that which has a replacement of the same kind e.g. wheat, and it perishes in his hands then he is liable to replace it with a like good. If it something which does not have an exact substitute? like counted goods which differ, then he should compensate with the price.

~ al-Quduri ~