

Question 1678) - How is lineage of children established to their fathers?

A: A man marries a woman. After six lunar months or more she gives birth. The child's lineage is attributed to him if he consents or if he remains silent. If the baby is born sooner than six months from the day of the marriage, then the baby is not attributed to him.

~ al-Quduri ~